Defining Diversity

- According to Meriam-Webster:
  - ♦ “composed of distinct or unlike elements or qualities”
- According to Chris and Ed:
  - ♦ “something like the variation of life forms of a tropical reef or rain forest”
    - Animals/fish
    - Plants/corals/fungi
    - Macroscopic/microscopic
    - Intimately interrelated
    - Complementary niches

Why should I care?

- Diversity is a key aspect in the health of an ecosystem, including that of an open-source project
- Without diversity a project can stagnate and die

Classic Diversity

- Classic Diversity Types

- ♦ Gender
- ♦ Race
- ♦ Culture
- ♦ Age
- ♦ Religion
- ♦ Sexual Orientation
- ♦ And so on...

- These are still important in open-source!
- However... open-source is slightly a different playing field

Open-source Diversity

- Macro-Diversity
  - ♦ E.g., top-level project (Modeling)
- Micro-Diversity
  - ♦ E.g., component or project (EMF)
- Different Backgrounds
  - ♦ Corporate
  - ♦ Academic
  - ♦ Independent
- Different Types of Committers
  - ♦ Full-time
  - ♦ Part-time
  - ♦ Contributors

How do I build diversity in my project?

- BUILDING Diversity Checklist

- ◆ Blogging
- ◆ User Groups
- ◆ Incubator Projects
  - Academic Participation
- ◆ Mailing Lists
- ◆ Demonstrations/Webinars
- ◆ IRC
- ◆ Newsgroups
- ◆ Google Summer of Code
- ◆ Wiki

Blogging

- Signup: <http://dev.eclipse.org/blogs/>
- Share your experience and knowledge
- Better notification than email or websites (RSS)
- Syndication @ PlanetEclipse [<http://planet.eclipse.org>]
  - ♦ The pulse of the Eclipse community
- Build a sense of community through a larger audience
- Generate excitement and interest

User Groups

- Java User Groups (JUGs)
- Eclipse Regional Communities
  - ♦ http://wiki.eclipse.org/Regional\_Communities

Incubator Projects

- Altruism
  - ♦ Find people with a passion
- Academic Participation
  - ♦ Researchers have a strong desire to do relevant work
- If you truly love something, set it free...
  - ♦ Others will share your passion if you enable them
- Give up control
  - ♦ Control is an illusion, there is only influence; give up control in order to grow your influence
- Incubation will create a snowball effect
  - ♦ The more people already involved, the more new people will want to join

Mailing Lists

- Transparent Development
  - ♦ If it's worth talking about, it's worth talking about it in public
- Use mailing lists for
  - ♦ Development Discussions
  - ♦ Meeting Notices
  - ♦ Meeting Minutes
- <http://www.eclipse.org/mail>

Demonstrations/Webinars

- Conferences
  - ♦ The community is dying to see you in action
  - ♦ The community is doing fantastic things you'll want to see
- Articles
  - ♦ EclipseCorner: <http://www.eclipse.org/articles>
  - ♦ DeveloperWorks @ IBM
- EclipseLive [<http://live.eclipse.org>]
  - ♦ Share the cool things your project does
  - ♦ Learn about the cool things other projects are doing
  - ♦ There's no better way to spend an hour

IRC

- A public forum like live chat rooms
- Help users and build community
- Get to know committers on a different level
- <http://wiki.eclipse.org/IRC>

Newsgroups

- Your users are the most important source of useful feedback you'll ever get
- Help them use your tools and frameworks; use their issues to improve your documentation and code
- Learn to harness them; they are your community and ultimately your extended team
- <http://www.eclipse.org/newsgroups>

Google Summer of Code (GSOC)

- One of the best ways to get new people involved
- <http://wiki.eclipse.org/GSOC>

Wiki

- Harness your users to help make your website better
- Empower them to turn the things you've helped them learn into useful information for others

- 🎁 Conclusion
- 🔌 Q&A

Conclusion

- Committers don't fall out of thin air
- Share your passion with others and they will share theirs with you
- Set a good example, others will copy you
- Listen more to the people who criticize than to the people who flatter; you'll learn more from the former
- Always criticize in the form of constructive suggestions
- Building diversity will make you and your project healthier and happier, and therefore more sustainable
